Woman in Gold

a movie starring Helen Mirren and Ryan Reynolds, about the masterpiece by Gustave Klimt, Portrait of Adele Bloch-Bauer, the Woman in Gold

This film chronicles the efforts of Maria Altman and her lawyer, Randy Schoenberg (played by Helen Mirren and Ryan Reynolds, below), to retrieve paintings from the Austrian government, long after they had been absconded from Maria's family during World War II, particularly the Woman in Gold, a portrait of Maria's Aunt Adele by Gustav Klimt. After years of proceedings, including a ruling by the US Supreme Court in 2004, the paintings were finally shipped to Maria's adopted city of Los Angeles several years later. The work became part of the museum collection of the Neue Galerie in New York City in 2006 and has been on display there ever since.

This 1907 portrait which took 3 years to complete (above, oil, silver and gold on canvas, 54" x 54"), one of two paintings of Aunt Adele, is considered a masterpiece of Klimt's "Golden Phase." Gustav Klimt was part of the Vienna Secession, an art movement that rejected traditional painting modes.

Resistance obstructs movement only from a lower sphere to a higher. It kicks in when we seek to pursue a calling in the arts, launch an innovative enterprise, or evolve to a higher station morally, ethically, or spiritually.

So if you're in Calcutta working with the Mother Teresa Foundation and you're thinking of bolting to launch a career in telemarketing . . . relax. Resistance will give you a free pass.
